DISC Comparison

Personality Comparison

Communicating Effectively

Andres tends to be naturally more withdrawn and focused than Eva, who is more energetic and bold. This can sometimes make natural communication more challenging. To improve their communication, Andres should be more assertive when communicating their opinion on a matter, while Eva should try to back up their ideas with concrete evidence as support.

Working Together

Eva is likely to be more comfortable moving in a new direction on a whim and adapting to different circumstances than Andres, who tends to spend a lot of time thinking through options and potential outcomes before making a firm decision. Andres may be comfortable letting Eva take charge, but should be more upfront when communicating his opinion. Eva should avoid making any decisions without consulting Andres to gain his thoughts and perspective.

Resolving Conflict

Eva may be more energetic in arguments than Andres, who tends to be a little more reserved when resolving conflict. Eva should avoid prolonging discussion or confronting Andres too strongly, which may make tensions worse. Andres should try to match (or come closer to) Eva's energy level, which may help resolve things more efficiently.

Giving Instructions

Andres and Eva both give very rigid, direct instructions but also prefer control, which can be an issue when one is managing a project. They can avoid conflict by clearly stating who has final authority and who needs to let go of control. However, it won't come naturally for either of them.

Managing Stress

Eva is likely to feel stressed by slow-paced, drawn out projects, while Andres may be frustrated by ideas that lack clarity and evidence. To avoid bringing stress to Eva, Andres should try to speed up processes, where possible, so that tasks or conversations don't drag on. Eva, however, should make sure to outline projects or ideas clearly to avoid any confusion, misunderstanding, or unnecessary stress.
